Brighton is within surprisingly easy reach of London thanks to the outstanding connections via trains and other public transport links, and easy road access. Commuters can, therefore, enjoy the best of both worlds by moving here, enjoying home life on the South coast with quick and easy transportation from the local train station into London for work and leisure.

It's got all the best city infrastructure, yet its vibe is relaxed and perhaps even a little eccentric too. It's near enough to London for those who work and still want to visit London now and then.

With exceptional transport links to London, Brighton is seeing plenty of public transport commuters with London paying salaries, but prefer to live in Brighton, by the sea.

THE  TIMES

Named One of The Best Places To Live in 2022

For those who want the cosmopolitan feel of the capital but the more affordable cost of living on the South East coast, Brighton is a perfect choice. Here, property prices are lower than those in London itself, yet its city centre offers many of the excellent amenities that you would expect from a major city. You can expect average house prices here to come in at around half the costs you'd find in London, which makes a move here highly appealing to Londoners used to the high prices of the capital.

Brighton is Britain's best city by the sea, but there are quieter areas such as Fiveways and Preston Park which offer easy access to the glorious countryside of the South Downs.

BEACH

Brighton is one of Britain's most popular coastal city and sits on the south coast in Sussex. Backing onto the South Downs its long sand and shingle beaches face into the English Channel. Brighton sits in the centre of a shallow bay which stretches from the headlands at Selsey Bill to Beachy Head.

Much of the town is centred on the seafront promenade which is lined with bars, cafes, shops and amusement arcades. Hove Newtown Road is just 15 minute walk away from the Brighton Beach.

Hotspot For Tourists

BEACH.

Brighton's beach is one of the most popular beaches in the nation. When the sun starts shining millions of Britons and visitors from overseas grab their suntan lotion and a towel and head to Brighton.

The atmosphere is always friendly and fun, and kids love to play on the beach, while adults enjoy soaking up a few rays and wandering around the other entertainment options nearby. It's quite possible that the British Bank Holiday was invented just so that you could spend a weekend in Brighton.

PIER.

Brighton Pier is the last of three piers that once served Brighton. It sees millions of visitors a year and is a throwback to the days of the Great British Coastal Resort town. It has appeared in several major British works including Quadrophenia by the Who.

THE ROYAL PAVILION.

The Royal Pavilion is a spectacular homage to the Indian architecture of its era, and it bears a certain passing resemblance to the Taj Mahal though without the heat of India to accompany it. It can get warm in Brighton but it's rarely scorching.

It was built for George, the Prince of Wales when construction began in 1787, but who would become Prince Regent in 1811. It was his seaside retreat and was designed by John Nash one of Britain's most daring architects who was also responsible for Marble Arch and Buckingham Palace.

BA i360.

The British Airways i360 is a moving viewing platform brought to you by the same design team that brought you the London Eye. On a clear day, you can see all the way to the Isle of Wight from the top and even on more overcast days – you can get a great view of Brighton, The South Downs and The English Channel.

FOOD CULTURE.

If you love seafood, then Brighton's definitely the place to be. It was recently highlighted in the mega foodie blog, Eat Your World, as a food lover's paradise. They praised the city for its multi-cultural flavours as well as for its tea rooms, vegan and vegetarian delights and incredible fine dining scene. It doesn't matter what you want to eat – Brighton has everything you need and while it's not always cheap, it's always tasty.

If that's not enough to satisfy your palate, we can also recommend that you try the Brighton Food Festival which adds even more choices to the menu in the city.

BRIGHTON LANES.

The Brighton Lanes are the cultural heart of the city. They were nearly demolished in the 1970s but have since become gentrified and it's where the new and the old minds of the city collide in explosions of creativity.

AMAZING NIGHTLIFE.

Whatever you like to do at night, Brighton has got you covered. There are more pubs than you can shake a stick at (locals claim there is more than one pub for each day of the year in Brighton). There is a fantastic range of nightclubs to choose from, no matter your musical tastes or sexual preferences.

If you prefer something a little less alcohol fuelled there are comedy nights, live bands, poetry readings and much more. In short, if you're bored in Brighton on an evening – you really need to get out of your hotel room and into the city.

One of the UK's most distinctive cities, Brighton & Hove is renowned for the spirit and diversity of its people, unique retail, leisure and cultural offer and world-famous heritage assets. It has become recognised as a hub of creativity, innovation and enterprise, with a buoyant small-business economy. Little wonder the city is fast attracting new investment from across the globe.

A STRONG RENTAL MARKET

With a young population (the average resident is in their mid-30s) and approaching 40,000 students at Sussex and Brighton Universities, there is always a high demand for rental property. Recent statistics also show Brighton and Hove to have extremely competitive rental yields.

LEADING EMPLOYERS

Among the global institutions to choose Brighton & Hove for their operations are international finance giant American Express, financial services provider Legal & General and appliance breakdown protection provider Domestic & General. Digital consumer intelligence experts Brandwatch and Paxton Access, specialists in smart building access systems, were also founded here.

SOUGHT AFTER LOCATION

Hove is the most sought after location in England and Wales for young professionals, with around 4000 moving from London to Brighton in recent years. Renowned as the top UK beach destination, its relaxed atmosphere and cosmopolitan culture, combined with the superb setting offers residents a very attractive lifestyle.

A HAPPY CITY

Property portal Rightmove's latest 2021 study ranks Hove as the 4th happiest place to live in the UK and the number 1 destination in the South East of England.

CREATIVE AND DIGITAL EXCELLENCE

Brighton & Hove attracts tech, media and telecoms businesses, with digital businesses contributing £1bn+ per annum to the local economy. The ICT and digital sector grew by more than 40% over five years up to 2018, with 19% of digital firms identified as 'high growth'.

Brighton & Hove is ideally located between the South Downs and the Sea making it extremely popular with just about every tenant demographic. With excellent transport links to London, Brighton is seeing more and more commuters on London salaries take residence within the area, due to a preference of living by the sea.

Whilst typically considered a city of young creatives, Brighton has also been identified as one of the top UK cities for business. With its strong economy, it continues to attract strong demand from tenants working within the professional sectors.
